Yugambeh Nation

Name: _____

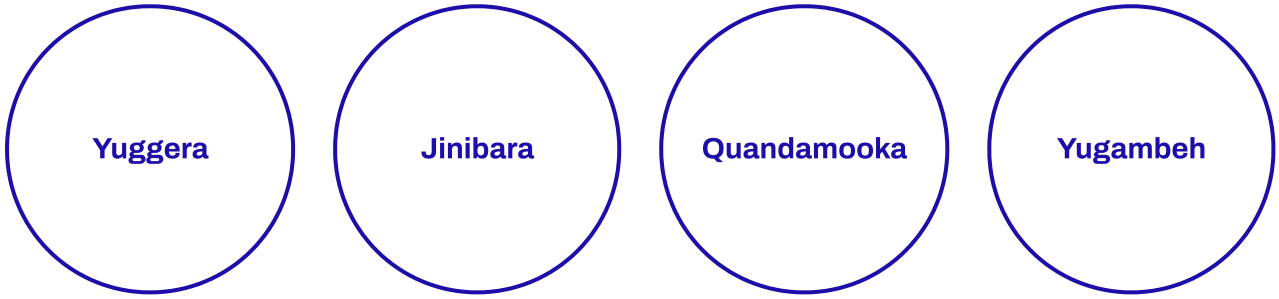

Date: _____

AGES 12 TO 16 · HISTORY AND CIVICS

Kin Across Borders

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander readers are advised that this sheet contains the name of a person who has died.

Dundalli was Turrwan (Darawan), a skin name that connects us through the sophisticated social and spiritual systems shared across the Yuggera, Jinibara, Quandamooka, and Yugambeh nations. The borders drawn later never severed the ancient ties of Law and blood that bind our Peoples together.

Draw lines to show how a shared skin name links these nations. What does it show about borders drawn by colonists?

Honouring the Resistance

Recognising that our ancestors did not simply “fade away,” but fought sophisticated legal and physical battles to protect their families.

What could this look like today?

Strengthening Kinship

Reaffirming the shared skin systems like Turrwan that prove our unity predates any colonial boundary.

What could this look like today?

Restoring Law

Moving forward by centring our own protocols, languages, and governance systems in how we care for Country and one another.

What could this look like today?

© Yugambeh Nation · yugam.be · Free to print and share for learning